

GLYCON, THE CULT LEADER

*"Earthly wealth belongeth to Saint Socrates. Isn't that right, Saint Socrates? squeaky voice Yes!"*

It's rare to meet an actual living saint in the world, so imagine your surprise when you found one in your sock drawer! Saint Socrates may look like a crudely made hand puppet, but he is actually a font of holy power granted by... uh... some deity or another. You've done your best to spread the word, and you built a cozy little cult for yourself before some grumpy doubters took offense.

What you're in for: The government of Capital turned a blind eye to your activities until you had the revelation that all taxation was evil, and those funds should go straight to the church of Saint Socrates instead. Within a week, they hauled you off to the Cauldron, muzzled you, and threw you in a cage (and threw Saint Socrates in a smaller cage with a smaller muzzle).

Your plea: "I don't recognize the authority of this court. Saint Socrates says, 'Justice cometh as a bolt from on high.' Your lordship, are you a bolt from on high? Let the record show that you are not."

De Caserta's Notes: "Holy authority plus completely flexible morals—a sterling combination."

Title: What Do You Think, Saint Socrates?

"The Socratic Method is where we ask Saint Socrates what to do and he tells us."

Prerequisite: You convinced an NPC that your puppet is alive.

Effect: The first time each game session that an NPC talks directly to your hand puppet, you gain a hero token. Once during any conversation or negotiation when you use a skill from the Interpersonal skill group you can have Saint Socrates speak instead, gaining an extra edge on the roll.

Complication: Give You a Hand

You started this Saint Socrates thing as a con, but there are times that you're not so sure. Sometimes Saint Socrates does things you don't expect—often leading to trouble down the road.

Once on each of your turns during combat, you can take an extra maneuver. If you do, the Director gains one Malice.
