

WARN, THE GUNSLINGER

"You're digging around in my chest for a heart of gold? Ha ha! Keep looking!"

Some call you a hired goon, some call you a henchman, but you prefer the term "professional." After all, merc work is a business. You're loyal to your clients and you keep your crew alive. And when the job is done, you can all walk away and never see each other again.

What you're in for: A munitions warehouse robbery went wrong—one of your crew acted like a fool around a thousand pounds of detonium—and a whole Capital neighborhood went up in flames.

Your plea: You didn't know the client was one of Ajax's boyos, or you wouldn't have taken the job. You try to stay out of politics.

De Caserta's Notes: "Unlike the rest of this crew, she can be depended on to keep her word—and lucky for us, she made one mistake, so we have leverage over her."

Title: Everyone Has a Price

"Everything in this world is for sale, but that doesn't mean I pay full price."

Prerequisite: During a negotiation, you achieved a tier 3 result on a test to learn an NPC's motivation or pitfall.

Effect: The first time each game session that you learn an NPC's motivation or pitfall, you gain a hero token. You gain an edge on tests made to read emotions or body language or to negotiate a price.

Complication: Psychic Paranoia

You're a native of a shadow world of violence and betrayal, and your time raider foresight is so reflexive that your weapon is drawn and firing before you're even conscious of the threat. Your instincts have saved your life more than once—but they've also led to some ugly incidents (your crew learned the hard way not to throw you a surprise party). You gain the Shoot First, Ask Questions Later triggered action.
